

JOB LOSSES SOAR; U.S. VIRUS CASES TOP WORLD

Since the coronavirus descended on Brooklyn Hospital Center three weeks ago, the staff has handled over 800 potential cases.

Unfilled Posts Force Scramble By Washington

By JENNIFER STERNHAGEN and ZOEAN KANNY-YOUNGS

WASHINGTON — Of the 75 senior positions in the Department of Homeland Security, 20 are either vacant or filled by acting officials, including Chad F. Wolf, the acting secretary who recently was unable to tell a Senate committee how many respirators and protective face masks were available in the United States.

The National Park Service, which like many federal agencies is full of vacancies in key posts, tried this week to fill the job of a director for the national capital region after hordes of visitors flooded to see the cherry blossoms near the National Mall, creating a public health hazard as the coronavirus continues to spread.

At the Department of Veterans Affairs, workers are scrambling to order medical supplies on Amazon after its leaders, lacking experience in disaster responses, failed to prepare for the onslaught of patients at its medical centers.

Even since President Trump came into office, a record high turnover and unfilled jobs have emptied offices across wide swaths of the federal bureaucracy. Now, current and former administration officials and disaster experts say the coronavirus has exposed those failings as never before.

Continued on Page A11

Online Class With No Way To Get There

By SHERI FINK

Alice Phillips was excited about picking up an off-the-shelf school in Harlem last week. She did not want to miss any classes and hoped to land on the fourth-grade honor roll again.

On Monday, the first day that New York City public schools began remote learning, the 10-year-old placed her iPad on a tray she set up over her pillow on a sofa bed in a studio that she shares with her mother and grandmother under a homeless shelter on the Upper West Side.

And then, Alice saw nothing. "I went downstairs to find out that they don't have any internet," said Krista Phillips-Lewis, Alice's mother. "I just sat down and my daughter educated, 'You want to screw me up?' Fine. But not my daughter's education."

The Department of Education, which runs the largest school systems in the country with more than 1.3 million students, began attempting to teach all students through remote learning this week because schools were closed to slow the spread of the coronavirus.

Shuttering the vast system, which includes 1,800 schools, was a serious challenge for the city, and the large-scale, indefinite school closures are uncharted territory, altering the lives and rou-

Continued on Page A16

Courage at a Brooklyn Hospital, At the Front of an Invisible War

By SHERI FINK

It was not even 9 in the morning and Dr. Sylvie de Souza's green N95 mask, which was supposed to form a seal against her face, was already askew.

In breveting runs on Monday, she trodged in clags between the emergency department, the chairs at the Brooklyn Hospital Center and a tent outside, keeping a sharp eye on the trauma doctors, nurses and other staff members who would screen nearly 100 walk-in patients for the coronavirus that day.

Inside her ER, more than a dozen people showing signs of infection waited for evaluation in an area used just a few weeks ago for stitches and casts. Another dozen

With Supplies Waning, Workers Soldier On

by GENE KATZ

lay on gurneys arranged one in front of the next, like a New York City park. One man on a ventilator was waiting for space in the intensive care unit.

Minutes before paramedics wheeled in a heart attack patient, Dr. de Souza pointed to beds reserved for serious emergencies, separated by a newly constructed wall from the suspected virus cases. "This is our safe area," she told a reporter. Then she corrected herself: "This is thought to be safe." There was really no way

Continued on Page A14

New Data Shows Staggering Toll of Outbreak

This article is by Ron Cogan, Patricia Cohen and Tiffany Blue.

More than three million people in the unemployment bourses last week were seeking a collective shoulder throughout the economy that is unlike anything Americans have experienced.

The alarming numbers, in a report released by the Labor Department on Thursday, provide some of the first hard data on the economic toll of the coronavirus pandemic, which has shut down whole swaths of American life faster than government statistics can keep track.

Just three weeks ago, barely 200,000 people applied for jobless benefits, a historically low number. In the half-century that the government has tracked applications, the worst week ever, with 610,000 so-called initial claims, had been in 2010.

Thursday's figure of nearly 3.3 million sets a grim record. "A large part of the increase is part seasonal," said Amy Bostick, executive director of DHS Market Analysis data and analysis firm.

The numbers provided only the first hint of the economic catastrophe in progress. Even comparatively optimistic forecasters expect millions more lost jobs, with them foreclosures, evictions and bankruptcies. Thousands of businesses have closed in response to the pandemic, and many will never reopen. Some economists say the decline in gross domestic product this year could rival the worst years of the Great Depression.

And there was bleak evidence on Thursday of the relentless course of the virus itself. Cases in the United States now exceed those in the rest of any nation, even China and India, according to a New York Times database. More than 1,000 cases across the country have been linked to the virus.

At least 160 million people na-

Continued on Page A17

Nearly 3.3 million unemployment claims were filed last week, a record number.

3,000,000

2,500,000

2,000,000

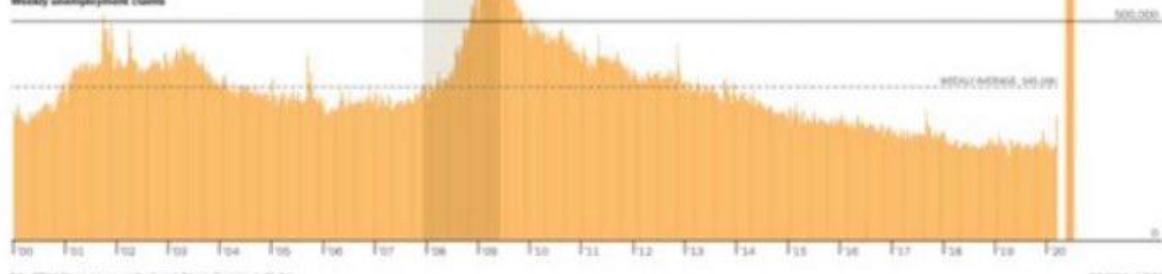

1,500,000

1,000,000

500,000

0

Weekly unemployment claims

BUSINESS B1-B9

Armed With Sewing Machines
With hospitals desperate for masks, people are pulling out their sewing machines to fill the void. PAGE B11

A Gusher Can't Be Contained
A chaotic mismatch between supply and demand for oil means the world is running out of places to store it. PAGE B10

INTERNATIONAL A18-A20

Maduro Is Indicted in U.S.
Federal prosecutors accused the Venezuelan president, whom the U.S. no longer recognizes, of participating in a narco-terrorism conspiracy. PAGE A20

Netanyahu Rival Relents
The Israeli prime minister was set to maintain power after his rival reversed course, citing the pandemic. PAGE A20

Brushing Aside a Slaughter
Russia and China, which often revile each other against other countries, are employing selective memory to address a massacre that occurred on their border in 1990. PAGE A20

NATIONAL A21-A23

New Focus on Health System
The pandemic gives added urgency to a central issue that was already a main talking point for Joseph R. Biden Jr. and other Democrats. PAGE A22

Starting Over on Foster Care
A lawyer led New Mexico to remake its failing system into one that advocates hope will serve as a national model. PAGE A22

SPORTSFRIEDAY B11-B15
Slow to Embrace a Delay
Athletes question why U.S. Olympic leaders took so long to join calls to postpone the Tokyo Games. PAGE B12

WEEKEND ARTS C1-C2

For Pint-Size Paleontologists
Like dinosaurs? Have crystals? Take a peek at two pages reprinted from The New York Times for Kids. PAGE C1

It's Virtually Perfect
Donald Judd's installation, below, at the Gagosian Gallery is impressive, in person or, for now, online. PAGE C1

EDITORIAL, OP-ED A26-A27
Paul Krugman
PAGE C1

OBITUARIES A26-A28

Chronicle of U.S. History
Richard Reeves's books on Nixon, Clinton and others could be as inspiring as his column. He was 82. PAGE A28

Globetrotters' Dean of Dribble
Fred "Curly" Neal dabbled less with his ball-handling wizardry in more than 6,000 games. He was 77. PAGE A28

BOOK REVIEWS A29-A30
PAGE C1